FALL of SGE - Fan Video

Hi there! Thanks again for your interest in appearing in our upcoming fan video for School for Good & Evil // Rise & Fall of the School for Good & Evil.

The idea is we're collecting a bunch of video submissions from fans, to be spliced into a short under 30 seconds promo video to hype up the upcoming release of the Fall of the School for Good & Evil (coming May 2, 2023, release of the promo video TBD but before then!).

somanc mentioned you in a comment: @andrea_mc17 sign edition is a separate edition! 😍

As an average kid who enjoyed painting, drawing, and watching movies, Tim Burton never imagined being a famous movie director. Burton’s work would eventually lead him to his manipulation of low key lighting, shot-reverse-shot, and non diatonic sound. Tim Burton shows character prejudice in many of his films, such as Edward Scissorhands, Big Fish, and Beetlejuice.

Therefore, Tim Burton, in his film Edward Scissorhands, introduces the character of Kim Boggs as arrogant and rude, when in the end she is a caring and free spirited young girl. Burton showcases her at first in an unflattering light using the cinematic technique low key lighting. Low key lighting is introducing Kim, as she and Jim, her then boyfriend, come out of their friends van saying their goodbyes after returning from a camping trip in the mountains, cut short by the heavy snowfall. Burton’s use of lighting reveals his character prejudice and the way he portrays women.
